

Online Service to Encourage Ex-Offender's Vote To Count More Ways than One

Press Release

Chicago, IL February 23, 2007 Vote and set yourself free – ArrestFree that is; At least this is what one Chicago Company wants to accomplish for ex-offenders in the upcoming Chicago citywide election being held on Tuesday February 27th. Kenneth Coats, creator of ArrestFree.com challenges all ex-offenders in Chicago to vote. ArrestFree.com is an innovative website that helps ex- offenders clear their minor arrest record in accordance with State laws around the U.S.

Coats states, "There is a disturbing myth among ex- convicts in Illinois that they cannot vote because of having an arrest record and this is simply not true. "I want to encourage Chicago ex-offenders' participation in this upcoming election to ensure their voices are heard, and will be offering our service for free on Election Day." says Coats. "Upon presenting proof of their voting stub, we will offer our expungement phone support service absolutely free on Tuesday, February 27th – on this day only."

Coats estimates that one out of every 132 Americans currently have an arrest record, and more alarming one out of every six African-American males have an arrest record which many of these non-violent offenders do not exercise their right to vote. Coat adds, "Many issues are at hand for ex-offenders namely employment, licensing and housing." Mr. Coats estimates there are as many as 300,000 people in Chicago eligible for expungement. "Our mission is to expunge over 1 million records nationwide in accordance with local state laws," Coats stated. "And [Chicago] my hometown is the place to start." Coats further explained.

Voters interested in this offer are encouraged to retain their voting stub and visit Arrestfree.com on Election Day for this limited time offer. This upcoming municipal election on February 27th is for the Alderman and Mayoral race.
